2015-16 Report to the Community
The Willow Domestic Violence Center opened in 1976 as a safe haven for victims of domestic abuse. Our safe home was the first domestic violence shelter in Kansas. Over the past 40 years, our services have evolved to meet the comprehensive needs of survivors of violence. We are leaders in the intervention, awareness, and prevention of domestic abuse and human trafficking.

This report details what has been done with your support – the programs, the people, and the numbers show enduring impact because of your partnership. Your gifts of dollars, time spent volunteering, and in-kind donations help keep a caring light in the window.

The Willow earns the trust of survivors when we help them find paths to safety and empowerment. Likewise, financial transparency has earned us the trust of donors and partners who help us save lives. The Willow creates social change – and that change begins with you. We treat our staff and volunteers with respect and dignity, the same way we treat victims. We make deliberate hires, focusing on training and retention to meet the unique needs of our survivors. Our staff creates an environment that is the opposite of what victims know: safe, calm, and peaceful, where everyone is appreciated. This atmosphere of hope and assurance is the core of our culture.

Our Finance Committee meets monthly to review The Willow’s financials and provides a report to the Board of Directors. An independent auditor is commissioned by the finance committee to conduct a full audit at the end of each fiscal year. The auditor presents the result directly to the Board of Directors, prepares the annual 990 filing, and submits it to the IRS.

We welcome any questions you may have regarding our financials, policies and procedures, or any other area in which you have interest or concern.
24 Hour Crisis Assistance
Whether for you or a friend in need, we are always here for information, support, and creating a plan for safety. 785-843-3333

Emergency Shelter
A confidential, healing environment for adults and their children to find help and hope. Every year, over 300 victims of domestic violence and human trafficking seek safety at our residential shelter home.

Support Services
Individual safety plans, basic needs, medical resources, and support groups at locations across the community are available for both adults and children. We provide assistance with housing, employment, legal resources, finances, and positive parenting.

Children's Services
We provide a range of services for children, both in our shelter home and in the community, ranging from art and music programs to healthy parenting classes and information about the effects of domestic violence on children. We focus on letting kids be kids in a trauma-informed environment. We provide a range of services both in shelter and in the community, ranging from art and music programs to healthy parenting classes and education about the effects of domestic violence on children.
Court and Systems Advocacy
We attend court proceedings and other important meetings with clients. We help navigate the court process, including filing protection orders and making legal referrals.

Employment Services and Work Program
Our employment services address trauma recovery while teaching skills for long-term employment. Our HOPEworks program serves recipients of state cash assistance.

Presentations and Trainings
We provide education and prevention training to faith communities, businesses, and community groups. Specialized training is offered to law enforcement, mental and physical health providers, school staff, and other professionals.

Youth Violence Prevention
Youth ranging in age from elementary school to college learn about healthy relationships with friends, classmates, and dating partners through our SAFE Program.
Our volunteers provide thousands of hours of valuable service to survivors and to our organization every year. Volunteering at The Willow is a rewarding and enriching experience and there is something for every schedule, skill set, and passion.

Here are a few of the ways to get involved:

Direct Service: Our safe shelter and hotline are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Volunteers are needed to assist residents and answer the hotline - anytime night or day.

Court Advocacy: Help victims of domestic violence and human trafficking navigate the court system, provide legal referrals, and assist in filing protection orders.

Community Advocacy: Individuals who would like to assist survivors who do not require our shelter services in healing and achieving their goals can work in this program on a very flexible schedule.

Support Groups: The Willow conducts support groups at various locations every week. We are always in need of volunteers to assist with those groups and provide children’s activities.

Indirect Service: There are many ways to support The Willow’s mission. We appreciate the help of volunteers in our administrative office, with our youth prevention program, and increasing our visibility at community events.

A survivor who has stayed twice in the shelter and currently participates in outreach services has, after a yearlong journey, obtained stable employment. She frequently talked about how she had the education, but not the confidence, to pursue her dreams and goals.

Her abuser and the father of her youngest child repeatedly told her that education is a waste of time. Physical violence was part of his abusive behavior, but he worked for years to dismantle her self-esteem with words. One of the reasons supportive services are so important is that, after having someone whispering—sometimes for years—into your ear that you aren’t good enough, that you will never be good enough, it takes multiple people repeatedly telling you that you are good enough before you believe they are telling the truth.

This month, she told me, “I’m awesome, actually. Look what I can accomplish without abuse in my life.”

One of the most beautiful things in my opinion is when survivors begin to thrive. Sometimes they are in a unique position to help other survivors of trauma, because they can honestly say, “I get it. I’ve been there too. It can be better.”
My abusive relationship is the reason why I called The Willow for services. I got information about domestic violence, and referrals to places around the community. I was able to get glasses while I was at the shelter with an advocate’s help, as well as get vouchers for clothes so I could get back on my feet. They had a job board that helped me to get a new job that pays well. In the future, I’m going to take their Financial Literacy classes so I can stay independent.

The staff was very supportive and helpful when I stayed in the shelter, and so were the other residents. Being able to have that connection and communication was so important for me.

I started working my third or fourth day there and was able to save money. Having only my name on my lease is such a blessing. It’s the first time I have ever had my own place. I just love my new place!

This experience has impacted me positively. The advocates were very encouraging and always saying positive things to me. That really gave me a boost, knowing that someone cares. That’s a good feeling.

Allison, a student at The University of Kansas, completed her 40 hour training at The Willow in March of 2016.

She knew rather early on in her work with The Willow that her interest and passion lied in helping survivors of human trafficking.

Allison's soft-spoken and under-stated personality is no indication her powerful will to make changes in lives and systems in order to protect and defend people who have been exploited by trafficking. She works fiercely for the people she supports and often needs to be reminded that she has studies and a life to tend to outside of The Willow. Her willingness to go the extra mile and take on work as it needs to be done is inspiring.

Allison works with survivors of human trafficking at The Willow approximately 40 hours a month. She has served six survivors since she began her with the HT program in May, and countless other survivors of domestic violence in her tenure.

Kristen Tebow, The Willow's Human Trafficking Program Coordinator, says “Allison is a great listener! When a survivor needs to talk to someone, she’s always willing to be a safe person to listen. She always helps survivors make plans and empowers survivors to overcome difficult barriers.”

Allison is a big believer in metaphors. She sees her work with survivors as one of quiet support in finding safety. “When I work with survivors,” she says, “they are the captain of their own lives and I’m only there to guide them when needed.”
